I-9 Form/Sample Performance Review
Introduction

This manual has been developed to assist you and ensure that each of your parishes, schools, or Catholic Charities is in compliance with federal and state laws governing compensation. Kindly review the manual and if you have any questions please refer them to Kim Hoelting by contacting her either by email (kim.hoelting@salinadiocese.org) or telephone (785) 820-8704 ext. #18.

Difference between Exempt and Non-Exempt Positions

- For a position to be exempt from overtime (and usually paid on a salary basis), a two-part test must be met:
  1. The position must be paid a salary at or above the limit of $684 a week or $35,568 annually established by the Federal Labor Standards Act (FLSA), AND
  2. The duties of the position must fall into one of the exemption categories established by the FLSA.
- Non-exempt positions must be paid an hourly rate and overtime at a rate of 1 ½ times the hourly rate for all hours worked over 40 in a 7-day week. For our Diocese, the standard workweek is Sunday through Saturday.
- Non-exempt employees must be paid for all hours worked. Hours worked include activities such as running an errand for work or taking work home. Employees cannot “volunteer” to do their regular job or work off the clock.

Exemption for Teachers

Teachers and substitute teachers in elementary, middle, and high schools will continue to be exempt without regard to a minimum salary. They are exempt under the FLSA from overtime and may be paid a salary without regard to a minimum salary.

Pre-Schools and Day Care Ministries

In order for a position to be classified as a “teacher” and exempt from the required minimum salary, the following conditions must be met:

1. The primary duties of the position must be teaching, tutoring, instructing or lecturing in order to impart knowledge, AND
2. The instruction must occur in an “educational establishment.” An “educational establishment” means: “A day or residential school in an elementary or secondary school system as determined under state law, an institution of higher education or other educational institution (such as special schools for children with mental or physical disabilities or gifted children, whether classified as elementary, secondary or higher). Whether any particular introductory program (e.g., kindergarten or nursery school program) qualifies as an educational establishment depends upon whether the program is included in the curriculum for elementary education established by the applicable state law.

Employees of pre-schools and day care ministries that do not meet the definition of “educational establishment” must be paid on an hourly basis and are entitled to overtime pay. This is not part of the new rule, but it is important to look at the duties of teachers in pre-schools and day care ministries to determine if they meet the definition.
Positions that are Always Non-Exempt (hourly)
Secretaries, administrative assistants, receptionists, and other administrative clerical positions are examples of positions that are always non-exempt and must be paid on an hourly basis and overtime for all hours worked over 40 in a week.

Executive Exemption
To qualify for the executive employee exemption, all of the following tests must be met:
- Manage the business, or department, or subdivision, AND
- Supervise at least two or more full time associates or the equivalent, AND
- Authority to hire, fire, or make suggestions to hire/fire, or other change of status decisions regarding other associates, AND
- Minimum Salary is $684 per week or $35,568 annually

Positions most likely qualifying for this exemption are:
- Director of Development
- Office Administrator

Administrative Exemption

- Minimum Salary is $684 per week or $35,568 annually

Positions most likely qualifying for this exemption are:
- Executive Assistant
- Grounds Maintenance/Maintenance Supervisor
- Cafeteria Manager

Professional Exemption
To qualify for the learned professional employee exemption, all of the following tests must be met:
- Primary duty must be the performance of work requiring advanced knowledge, defined as work which is predominantly intellectual in character and which includes work requiring the consistent exercise of discretion and judgment, and
- The advanced knowledge must be in a field of science or learning, and
- The advanced knowledge must be customarily acquired by a prolonged course of specialized intellectual instruction, AND

Positions most likely qualifying for this exemption are:
- Computer systems analyst
- Computer programmer
- Software engineer
- Other similarly skilled worker in the computer field

Ministerial Exemption

Positions that fall under the Ministerial Exemption are also exempt from overtime and the minimum salary wage. Please note it is not enough to label a position as a “ministry” position, even though we know that all employees of the diocese contribute to the ministry of the Church, they MUST have specific ministerial duties in order meet this classification.

These positions are clearly within the Ministerial Exemption:
- Priest, Pastor, Associate Pastor
- Seminarian
- Deacon
- Parish Life Coordinator
- Pastoral Associate
- Director of Religious Education (or equivalent)
- Liturgical Minister
- Director of Music or equivalent
- Youth, Family, and Campus Minister
- Catechist
- Sacristan

If the duties of the position are primarily clerical, even if the position supports a ministry, that position does NOT fall under the Ministerial Exemption. These positions might include Religious Education Assistant or Youth Ministry Assistant and other similar support positions.

The Legal Definition of “Minister”

A “minister” is broadly defined in civil law as a person who functions in a significant religious capacity (even if not ordained) in accord with very specific Ministerial Exemption legal cases.

The courts use a “totality of the circumstances” analysis to determine if a person is deemed a “minister.” Hosanna-Tabor
Evangelical Lutheran Church & Sch. v. EEOC, 132 S.Ct. 694 (2012). This analysis (“totality of the circumstances”) is a multi-factor, fact-intensive examination of the duties of the position. Whether or not a person is considered a minister is based primarily on the individual's job description and function.
In analyzing the job duties, factors to be considered may include:

1) Are employment hiring decisions regarding the employee position at issue made largely on religious criteria? (e.g., does the employee need to be Catholic?)
2) Is the employee qualified and authorized to perform the ceremonies of the church?
3) Is the employee engaged in activities traditionally considered ecclesiastical or religious, including attending to the religious needs of the faithful? Examples: Teaching a religious course or curriculum as part of teaching duties; leading students in daily prayers and devotions. Take away: Religious-based duties.
4) Did the employee receive religious training for the job and/or commissioning by the church?
5) Did the employee receive any benefits / perks commonly associated with ministers such as tax exempt housing or a housing allowance?
6) Does the employee’s job title and/or job description: (1) Reflect a ministerial function or role? or (2) Reflect a role in conveying the Church’s message and carrying out its mission? Take away: Religious role
7) Does the religious organization sincerely in good faith believe that the employee is to function as a minister?
8) Are the job functions inextricably intertwined with the religious organization’s religious doctrine or standards?
9) How much time does the employee spend in religious activities or functions? Take away: Relevant but not to be considered in isolation of other factors.
10) Does the employee perform a religious function or serve as a messenger or teacher of the faith?

Independent Contractors

The primary consideration of determining if a worker is an independent contractor is the economic independence of the worker. Several factors go into making this determination:

- The extent to which the work performed is an integral part of the employer’s business.
- Whether the worker’s managerial skills affect his or her opportunity for profit and loss.
- The relative investments in facilities and equipment by the worker.
- The worker’s skill and initiative.
- The permanency of the worker’s relationship with the employer.
- The nature and degree of control by the employer.

Most independent contractors have their own businesses, have other clients or customers, set their own hours and are not supervised by the employer.

SPECIAL NOTES:

Seminars, Lectures and Training for Non-Exempt Employees

Attending lectures, meetings, training programs, and similar activities outside the workplace is compensable time for non-exempt employees unless ALL of the following criteria are met:

1. Attendance is outside the employee’s regular working hours; AND
2. Attendance is voluntary; AND
3. The course, lecture, or meeting is NOT directly related to the employee’s job; AND
4. The employee does NOT perform any productive work during such attendance.
Training is considered related to the employee’s job if it is designed to help the employee manage his or her job more effectively. If training is for a different job or a new skill, then it is not job-related, even if the course incidentally improves the employee’s performance of his or her regular duties. For example, an IT employee who takes classes toward an accounting degree may incidentally improve his or her organizational skills, but the training is not job-related and is not compensable.

Voluntary attendance at independent training, courses, and college after hours is not compensable time, even if the employer pays or reimburses the employee for part of the tuition through an employee benefit plan. Similarly, if an employer offers a lecture or training session for the benefit of employees, voluntary attendance outside of work hours is not compensable time, even if it is job-related or paid by the employer. For example, an employer may offer all employees an opportunity to attend a lecture on improving management skills. If it is during work hours, the time spent at the session is compensable time. If the speaker event is outside of regular hours and is completely voluntary, it is not compensable time.

Receptions, Dinners and Social Events for Non-Exempt Employees

Employers that require non-exempt employees to attend social events (whether the events are sponsored by the employer or by another organization) must treat that time as compensable, even if the employee is not performing his or her regular duties. Employers must clearly communicate to non-exempt employees what is, and is not, required attendance, preferably in writing. Employers should not pressure non-exempt employees to attend an event that is not mandatory.

Time Records for Non-Exempt Employees

Courts place the burden on the Employer to support its position as to an employee’s hours worked through adequate contemporaneous records. In the absence of proper records, an employee may substantiate an FLSA claim merely by offering sufficient evidence to permit a reasonable inference as to his or her hours worked. Personal records kept by the employee without the Employer’s knowledge may be particularly damaging if the employer has no means of proving the hours worked by its employees.

In addition, evidence that an employer has directed employees not to record time actually worked will be used against the Employer. Employers are required to keep track of the hours worked by non-exempt employees. While time clocks are not required, some comparable means of keeping contemporaneous records of hours worked (such as weekly time sheets approved by employers) are essential to protect the Employer. Employers should follow record-keeping requirements meticulously, as good record-keeping practices often make a huge difference in the case of an audit.

I-9 Form

An I-9 form must be on file for every employee. Clergy forms are retained at the Chancery HR Office.

The position of Catechist in the Catholic Church provides a vital service to the people of God, catechists have a great responsibility to pass on the Deposit of Faith in a limited amount of time. In discerning the call to be a catechist, the two most important necessities are (1) that you are a baptized and practicing Catholic at least 18 years of age and (2) that you support the needs and desires of the pastor in charge of our parish.

The key to success is, first of all, your witness. As Pope Paul VI expressed so well in his encyclical Evangelization in the Modern World, “modern man listens more willingly to witnesses than to teachers, and if he does listen to teachers, it is because they are witnesses.” In order to exhibit this witness, you have to have a strong foundation, one rooted in the sacraments.

- Faith that manifests itself in their piety and daily life
- Love for the Church and communion with its pastors
- Apostolic spirit and missionary zeal

- Sufficient education
- The respect of the community
- The human, moral and technical qualities necessary for the work of a catechist, such as dynamism, good relations with others, etc.

The six tasks of Catechesis are fundamental in helping to know, to celebrate, and to contemplate the mystery of Christ:

1. Promoting knowledge of the faith: nourish the life of faith and equip to explain it
2. Liturgical education: celebrate the full, conscious and active participation in the liturgy
3. Moral formation: undertake a journey of interior transformation
4. Teaching to pray: assume the attitude of prayer and contemplation which Jesus had
5. Education for community life: call for the spirit of simplicity and humility, solicitude for the least among the brethren, care for those who are alienated, fraternal correction, mutual forgiveness
6. Missionary initiation: equip Christians to be present as witnesses in society
